Book Reviews

Bloggers

A significant advantage that traditionally published books have over self-published books is the blogger and consumer reviews they get due to readers not being aware of self published books.

Proven Efficient

While the media reviews appear in newspapers and magazines, most are relevant for just a day or a week. With limited book reviews on the internet, what is a must is ensuring enough consumer and blogger reviews that are perpetually present on the web. Anyone surfing for the book also gets to see what other consumers and readers have to say about the book and this helps the buyer's decision making.

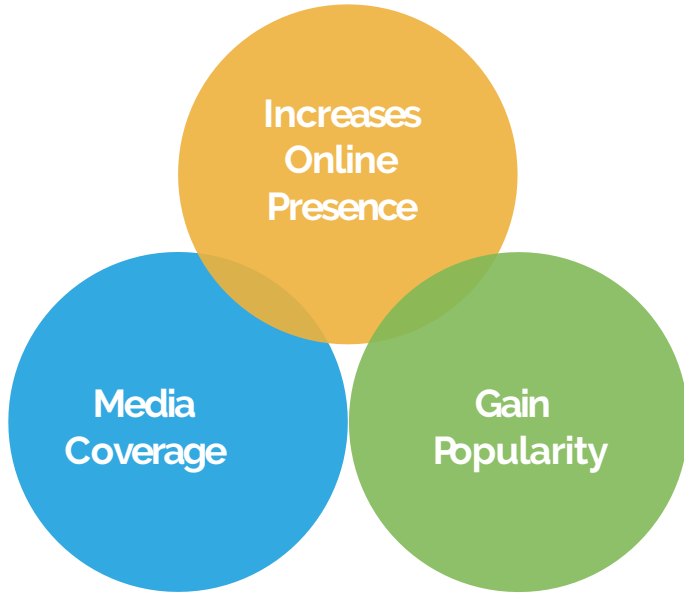

Newspapers & Magazines

Just like sports fans head to the last pages of the newspaper every day, book buyers check out the book review columns of newspapers and magazines to get a list of the recommended books.

What's not to love about BookTrailers?

A book trailer is all about making the readers relate to the story and suggesting various emotions that will allow the reader to better understand what the book is all about.

Book trailers are a new concept of marketing the author's book, but they work well, especially when they are designed in a professional way.

The book trailer's ability to bring out the essence of the book in a short and entertaining manner can help boost the author sales.

Making of the Book Trailer

Video Trailer Brief

Necessary details about the theme of the book in a standard format are obtained from the author to begin writing the script for the video.

Video Trailer Script

After receiving the Video Trailer Brief, the Script is created. The samples are crafted and sent to the author to get his inputs.

Video Trailer Production

After the final script is approved, the video goes into production. During this process, the creative team will work on the text, images, audio and animation that was approved by the author, and produce the video.

Video Trailer Submission

Once the video is produced, the watermarked version of the video is sent to the author. The author goes through the video carefully and suggests changes and improvements.

Video Trailer Promotion

After the required changes, the final video is handed over to the author. The video is then shared on Social Media and Youtube.
